Sees animals, harps, bowls, birds

Upland man's visions become wood creations

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

Some people see faces in clouds. Some see shapes in the tumbling surf ... but Leonard Dhuyvetter has more tangible visions... he sees animals, harps, bowls, birds, dragons and other things in wood.

The Upland man collects old branches, stumps as well as large and small chunks of wood. He hauls them into his backyard workshop, blows out the dirt with a high pressure air blast, picks and digs for foreign pieces of wood, bugs and dirt stuck to the surface.

He sands, polishes then seals the wood "with a finish my Dad told me how to make." To bring up the high gloss in his works, Dhuyvetter sometimes applies 15 to 20 coats. "Othertimes," he said, "it will only take a couple coats. It depends on the wood."

Dhuyvetter is a retired Navy lieutenant commander. He had "three ships sink under him during World War II." His father in Belgium was a wood finisher, and Dhuyvetter said he has always loved wood and it's warmth. "It's impossible to describe (the feeling for wood)," he said.

After World War II, the wood artist became the comptroller and plant manager for Lithoplate Inc., Covina. To get out of the hustle bustle of the flatlands, Dhuyvetter and his family moved into a "big A-frame I built in Running Springs." He commuted 170 miles daily from there to Covina for three years. Life in the mountain retreat ceased after Dhuyvetter had an accident during a rock slide when he was going downhill in a rainstorm.

The family moved permanently to Upland and that was the end of hilltop living, though Dhuyvetter's love of the woods and finding good pieces to turn into art continued.

"I go into the woods to find what I want," he said. "These pieces you see are roots and branches, not driftwood. None of my things are driftwood."

He pointed out one he sees as the jaws of Lucifer. He had found the wood growing between two big boulders. It took six months to complete the work from a rugged stump into a polished "statue."

Another piece of wood looks like a "bowl of plenty." This came from a tree which had grown around an obstruction. It weighs 20 pounds.

"See that Little Monster?" he asked. "That's an old piece of a pepper tree which grew on Euclid Avenue."

As he tours a visitor throughout his house, wood art is seen everywhere ... on table tops, coffee table, end tables, the walls, floor and over the double mantels.

"Here's an old dodo bird ... that's a hugh horse's neck ... see the totem pole? ... this is a brain ... that's a roadrunner ... here's a benign serpent ... see the harp? ... how about this skull? Doesn't it look like a skull? ... that's a haughty dog ... "

And finally, "This is my museum piece ... a dragon or a seahorse, whichever you want to see. I found this piece of wood up by Chaffey College half buried beneath the ground."

Dhuyvetter's love for his hobby is obvious and enthusiastic as he talks and caresses each piece of wood.

This is a gnarled part of a tree Leonard Dhuyvetter found in the woods. He dug out the dirt, sanded it smooth and put on a secret polish his Belgian father invented. The wood craftsman never uses driftwood.

Dorothy Palmer, left, and Betty Miller, both of Upland, use a painting by Lynda Wulf of Upland as an example of what can be entered in the "Historical Diamond Jubilee Art Show" to be held May 15 in Upland in celebration of the city's 75th anniversary. Paintings entered in the Upland show are to depict some subject relating to Upland's history. Artists may use oils, watercolors, acrylics, drawing, mixed media or pastels. Registration blanks are available at the Upland Chamber of Commerce. Wulf's painting won honorable mention in the Chino Historical Show of 1980 and shows the Vine Slope Winery. Returning order to intersection

Upland Officer Larry Mendoza took time off from his motorcycle Monday to instill a little order in the confusion that resulted when a cement truck overturned at the corner of Mountain Avenue and Foothill Boulevard and knocked the traffic signals out of commission. Mendoza added a little spice to an otherwise dull job by applauding an obedient driver at far left; blowing a few bubbles to pass the time; giving the A-OK to another motorist — and finally throwing up his hands at the futility of it all..

'Tiger Paws Supper Club'

Chaffey High alumni gather to present musical evening

A second annual Las Vegas-style event, complete with dinner, dancing and floor show, will be held at 7 p.m. in the Chaffey High School cafeteria April 3 and 4.

Dubbed the "Tiger Paws Supper Club," the event is expected to raise several thousand dollars for the high school's band and drill team.

Because of state cutbacks imposed by Proposition 13, the band and drill team have been forced to seek alternative funds, according to Diane De Cloedt, event organizer.

A tax-deductible donation is requested. To obtain more information or to make dinner reservations, call either 980-2604 or 987-4297.

Jack Mercer, Chaffey band director for 22 years, has designed a program of dance music and will conduct a 35-piece band made up of his current and former high school students.

Among the numbers scheduled to be played are "Night and Day," "Opus One," "Solitude,"and others.

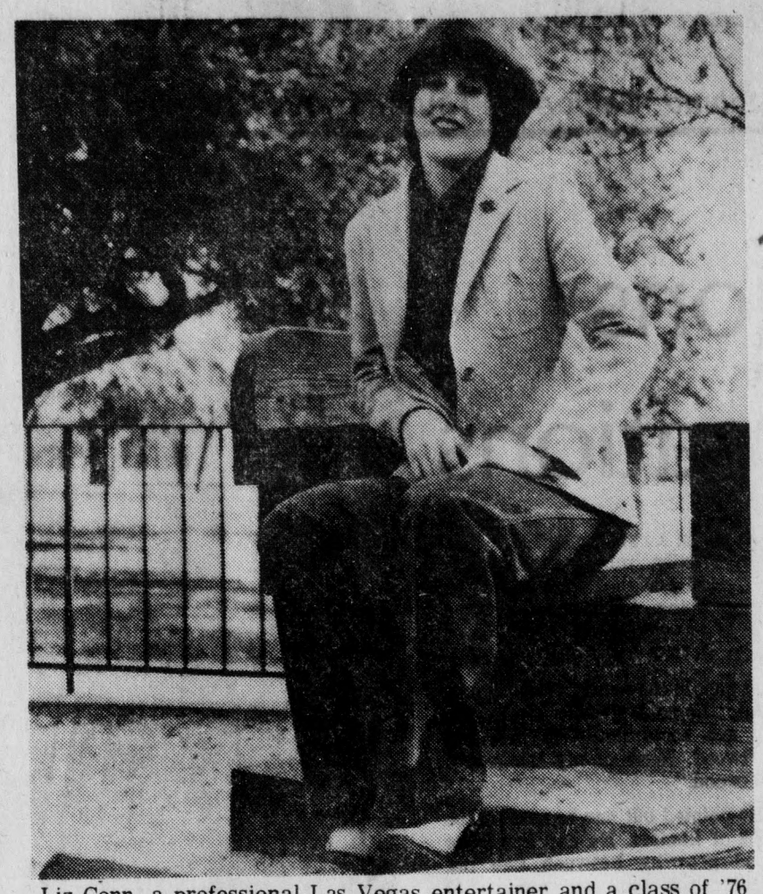

One of Mercer's former students, entertainer Liz Conn, will recreate the dances she has performed in Las Vegas, Mexico City and Japan.

Conn, a 1976 graduate, is currently performing at The Sahara in Las Vegas. Her contract there runs until September, when she is expected to help open a new resort in Japan.

Conn has performed in such local stage productions as "Fiddler on the Roof," "Hello Dolly," and "West Side Story."

Other band alumni set to perform include Dr. Danny Poore and Ron Sweet, both class of '64; Earl Phares, class of '66; Pat Arnold and Pat Rusich, both class of '67; Jim Stokes, class of '68; Jackie Harper, class of '74; Lee Holguine, class of '75; Steve Barkley, class of '77; Fred Parker, class of '78; Don Manning and Rene Sanchez, both class of '80.

Donations for the event have been received from such local businesses as Arnold Anderson Realty, Arrow Meat Co., the Ontario branch of Bank of America, Bumstead's Sporting Goods, C and A Tire Co., Burt Court and Associates, Futurus Inc., Idea Graphics, the Ontario and Upland Kiwanis clubs, La Cheminee restaurant, Ontario Escrow, and Pacific Cable Co.

Liz Conn, a professional Las Vegas entertainer and a class of '76 alumna from Chaffey High School, will perform at a fund-raiser for the high school's band April 3 and 4. For information call 980-2604 or 987-4297.

Attorney acts as mediator

Court cases fought outside courtroom

By KAREN ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Every Friday, lawyers and their clients gather in the jury deliberation room at the West Valley court complex and battle their cases outside of the courtroom.

Instead of a judge, a local attorney — chosen for his expertise and experience — acts as mediator. The goal is to reach an out-of-court settlement.

In the past, judges and court commissioners supervised mandatory settlement conferences for family law matters (dissolution of marriage, child custody, spousal and child support). That took up a lot of court time and money.

Under the new program, now in its third week, lawyers volunteer half a day every four weeks to supervise other attorneys trying to reach a settlement or narrow down the issues in their cases.

"If a case still needs to go to court, the goal is to reduce it to as small a scope as possible so when it does go to court, it takes the least amount of judicial time possible," said Jon D. Mikels, Superior Court coordinator.

Approximately 24 local family law specialists have volunteered to participate in the program. A list of experienced lawyers was drawn up by Mikels and Ontario attorney Don Haslam and reviewed by the Superior Court judges.

In legalese, the attorneys work "pro bono publico" (for the public good). Two attorneys supervise each Friday, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. Four conferences are held each hour, beginning at 9 a.m. and ending at noon and starting again at 1 and ending at 4 p.m. Eight attorneys and their clients meet each hour.

Similar programs have worked in other areas, including Pomona, according to Mikels.

"We're doing this out of necessity. With the increase in family law filings, the judge was setting aside one full day and parts of other days to hear the matters," he said.

The idea for the program grew out of a conference held in December for local family law lawyers. "It was being proposed to do away with mandatory settlement conferences because there was not sufficient judicial time to hear the cases. The attorneys felt settlement conferences were very important and urged that we start this program," Mikels said.

The Superior Court clerk's office schedules conferences for attorneys who have indicated they are ready to proceed with their cases.

"It gives lawyers a time and place to talk about the case and include the clients," said Haslam, who is with the firm Covington and Crowe. "And if there's some question about an issue, such as child support, both sides are right there."

The program also benefits clients because it moves their cases forward more quickly, said Mikels. A judge is available to take a stipulated settlement or a trial date is set if no settlement can be reached.

Haslam said all but one lawyer on the list consented to participate. "It's beneficial to all because an attorney who is a mediator in the morning could very well be a litigant in the afternoon. It also gives lawyers a kind of insight into the judging and settlement process."

Red Cross

Local officials blame fiscal woes on headquarters

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

Local American Red Cross officials are concerned that the agency's current financial difficulties are the result of poor management by the county headquarters.

The objections came following an ultimatum issued from the San Bernardino chapter office warning that the five outlying service centers, including the West End office in Ontario, would be shut down if fund-raising goals were not met by July.

Beecher Medlin, chairman of the West End group, said his office had been earning enough money in the last several years to cover expenses, but West End earnings were underwriting losses in other areas.

"Some of the service centers in the county are not carrying their own weight," he said. "I don't think the drain should come from the West End to support those offices."

Medlin said he recently advocated the closing of service centers in Fontana, Redlands and Victorville on the grounds the local communities were not supporting the offices financially. He added that the locations were geographically close enough to other service centers to receive emergency service when necessary.

"The rest of the board didn't go along with it then," he said, "and now they're talking about closing down all five offices."

The county chapter is comprised of offices in Barstow, Fontana, Redlands, Victorville, Ontario and the San Bernardino chapter headquarters. The chapter is required to submit a percentage of its earnings each year to the parent organization, the National American Red Cross, and is currently more than $200,000 behind in payments.

H.R. Owens, executive director of the San Bernardino office, said financial policy is established by the board of directors, with representatives from all the county offices.

"Any decisions of that sort are made by the board — my offices just carries them out," he said.

Medlin said he was concerned because the West End branch stood the chance of suffering along with the other offices, despite the fact it enjoyed more financial security.

"I think (Owens) and his staff are the ones making the decision to not pay the national dues," he said. "I don't think the board has ever made such a determination."

Owens chose not to answer the charges at this time.

Medlin also said he was insisting on a monthly breakdown of the county finances, information that both he and major contributors to the organization have not been able to receive.

"We're going to have to find out exactly where those dollars are going," he said. "If you're in a business, you have to have a budget. That's just the way things operate."

The Ontario office tried to form its own chapter, but was denied permission by the county organization.

Now, local officials are looking to beef up fund-raising efforts to try and correct the deficiency.

West End Service Center chief Marty Higgins said in addition to approaching local service clubs for help, the organization has two major activities planned for the coming months.

An art auction is scheduled for April 24 at the Army Reserve headquarters in Upland, and a Skate-a-Thon fundraiser is planned for June 23-24.

"It's frustrating," she admitted. "We have excellent volunteers, but there are always financial worries.

"People don't need us every day, just like you don't need the police every day. But when there's a disaster, we're there — and that's not including our day-to-day services.

"I don't really know what the problem is — I just know it doesn't work with the present county system. What we need is the continued support from the local people, for their local Red Cross."

Leadership talk heard by club

Eleanor Burris, leadership chairman of the San Bernardino District 21, California Federation of Women's Clubs, was guest speaker when the Montclair Vista Woman's Club met Tuesday night in the council chambers of the Montclair City Hall.

Election of officers was held, and plans for the district convention April 21 and 22 in Victorville were to be made.

The club has made donations to the Arthritis Foundation in memory of Helyn I. Deitrick, and to the Montclair Forest. Donations also went to Montclair's beautification program, the San Bernardino National Forest Pines Plantations and Chaffey West End Special Olympics for the Handicapped.

Club members recently attended a dinner honoring Montclair Mayor Harold M. Hayes, and a member presented him with a plaque from the group for his 21 years of "dedicated community service."

Club members are working for the American Cancer Society drive in April and supporting the Montclair-Ontario Junior's Miss Montclair contest April 4. They also are working with the Montclair Chamber of Commerce on the City of Montclair's 25th birthday celebration set for April 25 at the Montclair Plaza.

Dairy study focuses on supply of water

The quality and quantity of water appeared to be the main concern of a newly formed Community Advisory Committee which has undertaken a $50,000 study of the Chino Valley's dairy industry.

The 21-member committee has been charged with determining if it is in the industry's best interest to stay in the 18,000-acre Chino agricultural preserve or move elsewhere, preferably within San Bernardino County.

If the recommendation is to move, the committee also has to make suggestions as to the best timing.

A minority segment of the dairy industry has asked the county Board of Supervisors to break up the preserve so the owners can sell their land. They claim the Chino area land has become too valuable for farming and that they could operate dairies just as well elsewhere.

The committee, composed of 10 representatives from the Ontario-Chino area, 10 from the high desert and one from Redlands, held its first meeting this week. It toured the dairies of board members Dimas Costa and Fred Douma in the morning, and then met for lunch. Accompanying the group was First District Supervisors Robert Older and Marvin Krieger, a county senior planner who is heading the study.

"Everybody seemed to be interested in water," Krieger said after the session. "The committee realized that water is the key to survival."

He said the group has begun collecting data for the survey to be released to county supervisors next summer.

Is your family 'Boxed in' by TV?

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Editor

The communication breakdown a family suffers because of addiction to television watching has long been hammered home by sociologists and psychologists.

The truth of the potential destructiveness of TV was brought to a stark reality when a play, "Boxed in," was featured as the program for the 25th anniversary meeting of the West End Family Counseling Service. The luncheon session was held in Aita Auditorium at San Antonio Community Hospital in Upland.

Mrs. J.B. McCarter, retiring board member, introduced the play, which was presented by Plays for Living of Southern California, a division of the Family Service Association of America.

She said a family of five averages 6 hours a day of television watching, with 45 percent of American homes watching TV during their dinner hour.

"This play illustrates the breakdown of communication and shows men's addiction to sports, women mesmerized by soap operas and children's imaginations outdone by programs," she said.

Plays for Living productions are unique in that no props are used except straight chairs, allowing the viewers to use their imaginations.

As the story unfolds we see "Zorko," who has just returned to his home planet after a visit to earth, where he studied the "Earthlings" and became overwhelmed by their fondness for what he calls "the box."

"The box seems to be the dominant member of the family," Zorko tells Maya. "The Earthling family consists of father, mother, children and the box."

The viewers then saw three other actors depict an Earthling mother, father and teen-age son whose lives are controlled by the "box." The teen-ager says television helps him concentrate on his homework, and the mother notes that the baby's favorite friends are the "Doodlebugs" from a children's TV show.

"Children don't have to rely on imagination anymore," Zorko tells Maya. "It used to be in the olden days, a parent would sit a child on his/her lap and read to him and the child's imagination would create the pictures.

"Now on Earth, some children actually prefer being with the box to being with their Daddy," he said in mincing, precise tones of amazement.

"The old ones even remember when humans wrote on paper, but now they even look at the box instead of each other.

"You see, Maya, box love is so important," Zorko said.

The son tries to tell the Earthling mother that a friend is in trouble, but she's too preoccupied with her soap to listen. Then the boy tries to talk with his father, who says, "Just wait until the commercial break. These commercials are getting as good as the shows, though."

The Earthling mother begins to worry about the family and goes around turning off the TVs by remote-control. The couple attempt to re-learn to communicate with each other, but still are drawn back to the TV.

"Why do the Earthlings want so many things?" Maya asked Zorko as they discuss humans' addiction to products advertised on television.

"The box has assured him he'd be much happier if he had more," Zorko patiently explains.

Emblem Club has installation

The second installation of officers for the Rancho Cucamonga Emblem Club 520 was held recently at the Rancho Cucamonga Elks' Lodge, 2570, Rancho Cucamonga.

Carol Devlin was seated as president by Clara Miller, past supreme president, and Louise Harris, installing marshal.

Also invested were: Candy Kopchak, junior past president; Priscilla Ridgway, first vice president; Ione Hoxsey, second vice president; Marion Malone, financial secretary; Bonnie Stammer, treasurer; Merriellen Kersey, recording secretary; Shirley Nash, corresponding secretary; Betty Barnes, first trustee; Frances Landa, second trustee; Francie Devlin, third trustee; Tammy Shogren, marshal; Irene Brady, first assistant marshal; Kay Zandrino, second assistant marshal; Donna Stowell, chaplain; Kate Swigart, press correspondent; Leila Fredricksen, first guard; and Marilyn Groff, second guard.

During the program, a contribution from the Emblem Club was presented by Mrs. Kopchak, charter president, to Jack Shaffer, leading knight, for the Elk's major project.

Chamber installs new president

Herb Stempfl, vice president and general manager of Kemper Tool Co. of Chino, will be installed president of the Chino Valley Chamber of Commerce at the chamber's annual banquet April 2 at El Prado Country Club.

A resident of the area 21 years, Stampfl will succeed Randy Echito, who becomes chairman of the board, succeeding Don Crawford.

Crawford will serve as master of ceremonies and installing officer.

Other officers to be installed are Dennis Pine, vice president; Tom Kyle, second vice president; Stan Smeding, treasurer, and Carol Gallo, secretary.

New directors are Dennis Bruns, George Lening and Bea Moons. Holdover directors are Bill Kramer and Bob Wilder. Directors' terms run for three years.

Theme of the dinner will be "Premier Performances." Supporting that theme will be an array of local talent that will demonstrate the need for the city to have a community center of its own, according to Echito.

Tickets at $11 per person are available at the chamber office.

Area residents take liking to money market funds

By BRUCE THORNTON
Staff Writer

During the past few months, West End investors have taken a definite liking to money-market mutual fund investments, according to a local stockbroker.

Ronald R. Erickson of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in Upland said his investment firm has had this type of an account for approximately 2½ years, but only during the past five months or so have they become highly popular.

The company's fund is known as the Dean Witter Reynolds InterCapital Liquid Asset Fund.

Other companies have similar funds that are governed by rules that often differ slightly.

Erickson said the rise in popularity of these investment instruments has not taken place until recently because only in the last few months has the investing public become aware of their existence and conversant with their benefits.

Two of the major benefits are high interest rates and liquidity.

To open an InterCapital Liquid Asset Fund — using the Dean Witter fund as an example — a depositor may invest a minimum of $5,000 in fund shares and may buy additional shares in amounts as small as $100 by mailing a check to a New Jersey bank.

If the investor wishes to add to his account through a broker, it must be done in an amount of $1,000 or more at a time.

As for liquidity, an investor may withdraw any or all of his account without penalty or charge.

Erickson said major portions of the funds can be made available within 24 hours. Withdrawals are made by check, telephone, wire or mail.

The investor may write a check for a minimum of $500 against his account.

According to money market figures published for the week ended March 18, InterCapital had assets of $5.65 billion.

The fund limits its investments to U.S. government securities, obligations of government-regulated banks with assets of $1 billion or more, high-grade commercial paper and high-grade corporate obligations maturing in one-year or less, according to a brochure published by the company.

A portfolio of investments dated Aug. 31, 1980, shows the fund had 55.5 percent of money in big-bank certificates of deposits, 39 percent in commercial paper, about one-third of which was in electric utilities, and 4.7 percent in U.S. government obligations.

"These securities," the company brochure says, "historically have provided higher interest rates than those available through savings deposits at commercial banks and thrift institutions."

Money market funds are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Funds deposited in banks and savings and loans are covered by the FDIC up to $100,000.

Erickson said the compounded yield on funds invested in InterCapital for the entire year of 1980 amounted to 12.7 percent.

The highest yield during the year, he said, was approximately 18 percent and the lowest approximately 8¾ percent.

The yield listed for Thursday was 15.48 percent.

Interest is paid on a daily basis at a rate that changes from day to day. In addition, according to the brochure, the fund declares dividends from net income on each day it's open for businesses. It automatically reinvests the dividends in additional shares at the new asset value per share at the close of the business day.

All this is done for the investor without charge but the company points out it's not doing the job for nothing.

The firm's liturature explains that there are no sales or service charges because stock brokers get no sales commission for selling or promoting shares in the fund.

Convention scheduled in Claremont

Student Republicans are enthused about politics

Staff photo

Ron Reynolds, left, and Sean McPhetridge, both of Upland, discuss plans for the convention of the California Student Republican Organization to be held April 4 and 5 at Griswold's Indian Hill Inn, Claremont. Hosting the event will be the Claremont Junior Republican Club of which both young men are members. All young Republicans, 13 to 18, are invited to the convention. Call McPhetridge at 982-6048 for further information.

A convention to encourage membership is being held April 4 and 5 at Griswold's Indian Hill Inn, Claremont, by the California Student Republican Organization.

Hosting the event will be the Claremont Junior Republican Club with Ron Reynold and Sean McPhetridge, both of Upland, working on arrangements.

Reynolds is treasurer of the state organization, and McPhetridge is vice president of the local group.

"There are about 25 young men and women who belong to the Claremont Club," Reynolds said. The state organization, consisting of clubs chiefly in Southern California, has about 150 members between the ages of 13 to 18.

Theodore Bruinsma, dean of Layola Law School, will be guest speaker for the banquet. "We also will have a luncheon, dance, election speeches and the election of state officers," Reynolds said. "Adults are invited but only if they bring along their teen-age kids," the young Republican said.

"We're hoping to get kids enthused about the club and in the political process," he said.

The Claremont GOP Club has Ann Borseth of Claremont as adviser, and there are an equal number of young men and women in the organization. Members meet once a month in private homes, they discuss political issues, work on registering voters of all political persuasions and other things of political interest.

McPhetridge said, "I think kids think what their parents are, they should be ... I don't agree with this. I think kids should be aware of politics and make their own decisions on parties." McPhetridge said as an example, his mother, Mrs. Dale McPhetridge, is a Republican and, "I think my father is registered as a Democrat."

He continued by saying, "Lots of kids don't think about politics, but in the club we learn what's going on. I see lots of points I don't agree on with both the Republicans and Democrats ... it's a learning thing."

Reynolds said he has been to Washington, D.C., three times. "I was quite young, but I was impressed by the whole system," he said. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Reynolds, attended the inauguration of Ronald Reagan in January. Reynold's family political interests also are split.

Both young men said they enjoy meeting those in "high rank" of the Republican Party such as Tirso De. Hunco, chairman of the State Central Committee, and Sen. Bill Campbell (R-33rd District) of Whittier, senate minority leader.

During the 1980 campaigns, Reynolds and McPhetridge worked for David Dreier, who won the congressional seat in District 35. "All the club worked for him," Reynolds offered. He also said he had attended Ronald Reagan's 69th birthday party in Los Angeles.

It is the hope of the two young Republicans that the April convention will interest other young people in learning more about the entire political system in the United States government. For further information, call McPhetridge at 982-6048.

Transplant, bean, okra time is now

There are few gardening experiences that can rival growing your own vegetables. You actually reap the "fruits of your labor" with tasty harvests of juicy tomatoes, crisp cucumbers, crunchy radishes, sweet corn and many more.

In the warmer days ahead, as the danger of frost passes in the colder areas, transplants of tomatoes, peppers and eggplant will be available. It will also be the time to plant snap beans and okra. In the warm interior valleys, where they thrive, you'll want to set aside space for summer squash, cucumbers and melon crops. You should solicit advice from your local nurseryman as to which varieties are best for your area; he can also outline cultural requirements of any particular vegetable. The planting site should be one that is easily watered. A level area that receives most of the day's sun is essential, advises the California Association of Nurserymen.

Avid gardeners will prepare the soil prior to planting vegetables by working organic materials into the area. This is extremely beneficial and produces results. If you aren't inclined to prepare the soil ahead of time, a ready- to- use nurserymen's planter mix can be worked into the ground at the time you plant.

As in '30s

Garden is still an investment

A million more Americans had vegetable gardens in 1980 than in 1979. Is a garden worth the time and effort?

To find out, Gardens for All, the Nonprofit National Association for Gardening, asked gardening consultant and writer Dick Raymond to design, plant and evaluate the 25 x 30-foot "Independence Garden."

"I grew up during the Depression in a family with nine children," says Raymond. "I started gardening when I was six because that's how we survived.

"This Independence Garden was designed to fit an average backyard and produced $547 worth of fresh vegetables. A garden is still an excellent investment today, particularly with every day's newspaper telling us how expensive things will be in the future."

Raymond's 750-foot garden produced more than a pound of food per square foot of garden space. The total yield was 772 pounds, not including, blemished vegetables and crop failures that reduced yields by 6 to 7 percent. "This would have increased the value by another $30 or more, but we do have to take into account losses from pest and weather conditions that face every gardener."

"The value of the garden was about 73 cents per square foot," says Raymond, "and we used the average summer prices at three supermarkets. Freezing or canning some of the produce would increase the value. We counted only table quality vegetables."

In the test garden, 34 varieties were planted. Highest producing plants were tomatoes, summer squash and onions, and lowest were peppers. A 50-square foot corn planting was lost to pests.

According to a Gallup Survey of Gardening in America, sponsored by Gardens for All, some 34 million households produced some of their own food in 1980 in vegetable gardens. The typical expenditure for materials was $19.

Wednesday Afternoon Club of S.D.

Richard A. Myer of Glendora, Western bronze sculptor, will give a slide program for the Wednesday Afternoon Club of San Dimas next week.

The program will start at 1 p.m. with a luncheon served by Mrs. John Walgren at her home, 719 N. Shaftesbury, San Dimas. She will be assisted by Mrs. James Balthrope, Mrs. E. A. Carlson and Mrs. L. G. Snodgrass.

Myer will not only display his famous sculptures of 10 Indians, but he will demonstrate how each sculpture is made from an individual mold using the "lost wax" process.

On May 1-3, Myer, a member of the American Indian and Cowboy Artists Association, will be exhibiting five new sculptures at the fifth annual San Dimas Festival of Western Art.

Myer was honored recently when Nevada state officials in Boulder City, Nev., dedicated his larger-than-life bronze bust of Frank Crowe, engineer who assisted in the construction of Boulder Dam. The bust eventually will be placed in a museum.

His Western bronzes, which were exhibited at the Disneyland Hotel last month, have earned him major awards. Some of the collectors of his works include former President Gerald Ford, Wayne Newton, George Montgomery, John Wayne and Roy Rogers.

A look at California

"California Byways" will be the topic of Bob Roney at the Pomona Adult School Forum, to be held in the Pomona Unified School District auditorium, Ninth and Garey avenues, on Monday at 7:45 p.m.

Among the highlights of the film are a visit with the last lighthouse keeper on the California coast; park rangers in Yosemite working with black bears, a ski trip into the active volcanic sulphur works of Lassen Volcanic National Park; giant redwood, sequoia and bristlecone trees, the plight of pioneers lost in Death Valley in 1949, and other aspects of the state of California.

Roney points out that both the lowest and the highest points in the 48 continguous states are within California, as well as the tallest and most massive trees — the oldest living creatures on earth. Almost half of the state's 159,000 square miles have been set aside in the form of national parks, monuments and recreation areas.

Capistrano chosen as getaway locale

Early spring is one of the most scenic times of the year to visit San Juan Capistrano, which the Automobile Club of Southern California has chosen as the Gas-Saver Get-Away destination for March.

According to Jim Norton, the Auto Club's travel research supervisor, the surrounding hillsides are "vivid with new green following the late-coming winter rains and wild-mustard provides accents of bright yellow everywhere."

The community's fame is based upon its main attraction — Mission San Juan Capistrano — and the well-publicized return of swallows from Argentina every years on St. Joseph's Day, which was Thursday.

Norton said the majority of swallows "actually do arrive on the prescribed date, although 'scouts' appear earlier and some arrive later if delayed by bad weather along the way. Upon arrival, the remarkable little birds immediately launch into nest building with a noisy bustle and determination that is fascinating to observe."

Each year, the swallows' return is celebrated with a week-long festival — Fiesta de las Golondrinas — that features parades, barbecues and special events. This year's activities will be held through today. For details, contact the Chamber of Commerce at (714) 493-4700.

The grounds of Mission San Juan Capistrano are open daily from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Norton continued, and "are among the loveliest in the state." Established in 1776 as the seventh in the chain of 21 California missions, San Juan Capistrano was once the "most beautiful and impressive of them all. Its glory was a huge stone church of cathedral proportions that took a multitude of workers nearly a decade to construct." A bell tower soared twelve stories and the nave, capped with seven domes, could accommodate hundreds of worshippers.

But, during morning mass in December of 1812, a violent earthquake reduced the church to rubble in less than a minute, killing 40 of the congregation. Softened by clinging vines of ivy and bougainvillea, the ruins are all that remain of the great church today.

Other buildings in the mission complex have been partially or completely restored, including the original mission structure — Serra Chapel — that predated the stone church. Especially beautiful are the arched colonnades that line many of the buildings. The mission museum, which occupies the old padres' quarters, houses displays of many original artifacts and documents that date back to the mission's earliest days.

"A good way to see the mission," Norton continued, "is to follow the brochure that visitors receive as part of their one-dollar entry fee to the grounds. It describes points of interest along a self-guided tour that threads through the mission's beautifully landscaped gardens and patios."

Outside the mission walls are a number of historically important adobes. Most have been converted to uses very different from those originally intended (some are boutiques, restaurants or souvenir shops), but one house is still occupied by descendants of the Rios family that built it in 1794. The nearby railway depot, a picturesque building in the neo-mission style, still functions as a stop on the busy Los Angeles to San Diego main line but is a popular restaurant as well.

Norton said guided walking tours of the historic buildings are given at 1 p.m. every Sunday. Conducted by the San Juan Capistrano Historical Society, the free tours leave from El Peon, directly opposite the mission entrance.

Time to plan fair group tours is now

This is the time to plan group tours of this fall's Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona which will run for 18 days — sept. 10 through 27, Jeff Hensley, marketing manager, said.

"We encourage early planning," said Hensley, "because of the length of time it requires to put a tour together."

Groups of 25 and more can purchase tickets at a 25 percent discount. These are $3 each, a saving of $1 over the regular admission cost.

Admission to the horse races every afternoon except Monday and the nightly celebrity grandstand shows are included in the general admission price, Hensley said.

The County Fair, which comprises 487 acres, is the fourth largest event of its kind on the North American continent. Larger ones are Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto in Canada (3,060,500), Texas State Fair (2,907,518), and Ohio State Fair (2,724,583).

Hensley said clubs, organizations, companies and other groups desiring more detailed information on the Fair can obtain a comprehensive fact sheet by writing to the Fair's Media Information Department, P.O. Box 2250, Pomona, CA 91769.

A new $1.8 million dollar recreation center featuring several spectacular rides will be one of the features of this year's Fair, said Hensley.

Planting a greenbelt is best protection from fires

Mud slides and brush fires — protecting your property against them is neither cheap nor easy. But, according to a southern California nurseryman, it can be done most effectively by planting a greenbelt.

Richard Greer, president of Pomona Wholesale Nursery, defines a greenbelt as a landscaped, irrigated zone separating a home from the brush covered and potentially flammable chaparral surrounding it.

"Although the first purpose of a greenbelt is to slow the spread of fire, it also has a second purpose — stopping erosion and mud slides on land that has been recently burned," Greer explains.

Essentially, there are four steps in constructing a greenbelt. "If your land was not burned in the recent fires, the first step is to remove all native brush from around the house for no less than 100 feet," Greer says.

Dense brush is particularly dangerous when it is growing in a canyon below a house because of the chimney draft effect which literally pulls the flames up the canyon to the house. In most cases, chaparral brush needs to be removed and replaced with low ground cover. It produces less fuel, thereby, preventing flames from racing up the hillside.

If your land was burned, Greer advises installing emergency control measures to prevent flooding and mud slides.

"Plant burned slopes with minimum-hazard grasses such as soft chess, barley or annual ryegrass. Then cover them with either a jute matting or a straw mulch," he says.

Once the area around a house is prepared, the next step is to install a green belt.

The important thing is to choose ground covers, shrubs and trees that will let you keep a low level of fuel volume around your home while allowing you to have an asthetically pleasant landscape.

The concept of low fuel volume is based on a simple fact — low growing plants usually have lower fuel volume than taller plants. However, that does not mean tall shrubs and trees can't be used.

"More flammable, taller plants — chamise, eucalyptus, coyote bush and rosemary — can be used but combine them with relatively nonflammable plants — ice plants and Algerian ivy. The important thing," Greer says, "is to follow a regular routine of pruning, weeding and removing litter to reduce the amount of fuel available."

Which plants should you use in a green belt?

That answer depends on each situation, but some plants are more effective than others.

"In general," Greer says, "it is better to use plants that have deep roots, will resprout after a fire and are drought and smog tolerant."

Although there are a host of ground covers having one or more of those characteristics, some of the common ones include dwarf coyote bush, Algerian ivy, sunrose, African creeping daisy and creeping rosemary. (But Greer suggests that before you buy any plants that you check with an expert to find out which ones are best suited to your area.)

"Ice plants are good low fuel plants. But," he cautions, "they have shallow root systems which make them less adaptable for erosion control than other ground cover. One alternative is honeysuckle, a low growing native that is drought tolerant and has a low fuel volume."

When you're ready to choose shrubs, Greer says you can pick from a wide variety, including Carmel creeper, a lower growing, drought resistant, evergreen shrub with thick leaves and bright blue flowers; rockrose, a low spreading evergreen shrub that is drought resistant; toyon, a California native that is drought resistant and can be used as a large specimen shrub or tree; and oleander, a sturdy, drought tolerant shrub that grows to about 20 feet and resprouts after it is burned.

You can also use some bushes such as scrub oaks, Point Reyes, Ceanothus, chokecherry and sugarbush and nurture them as short stemmed trees.

"At a distance of about 25 or more feet apart, these shrubs can be kept in the low fuel volume category, provided they're pruned frequently," he says.

Most people assume trees are the worst fire hazard. And they can be, especially if homeowners forget to prune them. But when used intelligently, trees can help channel an initial convection heat wave away from a home, possibly saving it.

When buying trees consider their drought tolerance, their ability to grow in alkaline soils and their smog resistance. Carob, eucalyptus, California pepper, Brazilian pepper, fan palms and Canary Islands pines each have one or more of these characteristics.

"A newcomer to this area is the Mondell Pine. It's smog, drought and alkaline resistant, but its most unique feature is its ability to grow four feet a year. Within five years a burned slope could have 12 to 14 feet tall Mondell growing on it," Greer says.

Once the green belt is installed, plants need to receive supplemental water when there isn't enough rain to meet their water requirements.

"Watering plants is essential when there is a possibility of fire, for the simple reason that most plants are less flammable when they have a higher water content."

But Greer does caution now to over water plants. "You can kill or damage many drought tolerant species with too much water."

Once the green belt is established, Greer says it too can become a fire hazard if it isn't properly maintained by pruning, removing litter, controlling weeds and renovating plantings.

For further information, Greer suggests contacting a local nurseryman or county agent.

Claremont Y undertakes first gifts campaign

Seeking a total of $30,000, the Claremont YMCA is undertaking its first major gifts campaign in addition to the annual sustaining drive.

The drive to seek $13,000 in major gifts from individuals and businesses in Claremont is progressing well, according to chairman Jess Swick.

Swick, a past president of the Claremont YMCA and valley insurance agent, said the campaign committee is using a face-to-face approach to obtain support from "anyone who cares about other people."

Members of the major gifts division committee are Frank Hungerford, Steve Hammitt, Ted Neward, Alice Hillburg, Dr. Carl Davis, Dr. Richard Latimer, Dr. Bob Weiser amd Gordon Curtis.

Swick also is vice president of the Claremont Kiwanis Club and a member of the Pomona Valley Estate Planning Council.

The Rev. Mary Ellen Kilsby and Gyle Tague are division chairmen for the $17,000 sustaining drive which starts this week.

Mrs. Kilsby is a past president of the Claremont Board of Education, an ordained minister and a 1956 graduate of Pomona College.

Tague is a past president of the Claremont YMCA and a principal in the Claremont Unified School District.

The two divisions each have six teams with four workers per team. The total number of campaigners will be 61, according to Joe Zakem, executive director of the Claremont YMCA.

Team captains under the direction of Mrs. Kilsby are Dr. James Monson, Dr. Paul Irwin, Carol Blanshard, Dr. Latimer, Glenn Swick and Elaine Martinez.

Team captians in Tague's division are Dr. Davis, Bill Dennis, Chuck and Nancy Magnusson, Joan Presecan and Phil Bauman.

The final report will be due April 7 and a victory celebration is planned April 9.

The Claremont YMCA served over 2,000 children, young people and families in 1980. It has extended its program to include year-around swimming in its pool on the campus of El Roble Intermediate School, day camps during the summer and school vacations, youth clubs and an outreach program for boys and girls between 5 and 17 years of age.

Swick explained that all funds are for sustaining programs to help the YMCA serve the needs of the community, not for capital development.

Arboretum to hold specialty iris show

The Aril Society International will present its 15th annual specialty iris show April 4 and 5 at the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum, 301 N. Baldwin Ave., Arcadia. The show is open to the public on Saturday from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Admission to the show and parking are included in the Arboretum entrance fee of $1 for adults and 50 cents for adult students with ID, youngsters 5-17 years of age, and senior citizens.

Aril species and aril hybrids are featured, but sections of the show will be devoted to other early iris such as dwarf bearded iris, Siberian iris, and Pacific Coast natives. The competitive sections in the floral arrangement division will be separated into professional, beginning and advanced amateur, and junior sections. The show is an open competition with exhibition privileges extended to everyone in both the horticultural display and arrangement divisions. Accredited American Iris Society judges will confer ribbons and special awards in all sections. There is no entry fee, although reservations for arrangement entries must be made by Monday. Call Claire Hood at (213) 346-9365 for reservations and information on this year's themes in the artistic categories.

According to Duncan Eader, show chairman, arils and other early blooming iris have subtle differences that set them aparet from the more familiar tall bearded iris, although the blooms may be almost the same size. Most of the iris in the show are about one foot tall, compared with the three-foot-tall bearded species.

Church offers refuge when times troubled

By REV. RAY E. COATNEY
Montclair Ministerial Association

A refuge in times of trouble, so wrote the psalmist David, in the ninth Psalm. David was a man troubled many times by varied types of problems, many of his own making, but blessed of the Lord as he took refuge in him.

A refuge is a place of shelter, a place of protection, a place of comfort. David found this in the Lord, for he said, "They that know thy name will put their trust in thee: for thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek thee." Surely in our troubled times, when crime is rampant and it is unsafe on the streets, where financial problems haunt the world, where nation is against nation, where families are beset with personal problems, there is a need to seek refuge.

Jesus said to Peter about the church, his church, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." We may be in troubled times, we may experience toubles in one form or another, but there is a place of refuge nearby, a local church. The God that David spoke of is worshiped there, he can be trusted, he will give peace where there is no peace.

In the seventeenth chapter of St. John we find Jesus in prayer a short time before he was crucified, praying for his disciples and Christians everywhere, saying, "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil, and that they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us."

It is with confidence that we should approach the Lord, that we should assemble in worship, knowing that he cares for us and that his house is a shelter in time of storm, and that a peace and comfort can be had in midst of turmoil.

Rev. Coatney is minister at Echos of Calvary Christian Center in Montclair.

'Public Education Sabbath' observed

The Pomona Valley Council of Churches has declared the weekend of April 5 to be observed as "Public Education Sabbath" in the churches.

Our churches can play a significant role in the area of public education as they relate to children, youth, parents, teachers, administrators, school board members, and many other concerned persons. The churches are being urged to realize that they can provide a much needed support community for persons engaged in struggles to solve educational problems and provide a means for informing the public about educational needs and developments.

The Council of Churches is suggesting certain activities in the churches for that week such as worship services based on the theme of education, recognition of those in the church who work in our public schools, having someone active in the public schools give a short statement on his or her "ministry" in public education and how the work of the church in church school and youth programs helps the school, arranging for tours of local schools by church pastors and others, arranging for members of congregations to attend board of education meetings, urging people in the church to serve as tutors in local schools or to plan programs or extra-curricular programs for the school.

Ceremony honors member of church

Following a recent Sunday service, the members of Mt. Calvary Lutheran Church, Diamond Bar, received and dedicated a flag pole to the memory of Eugene F. Brolin, a recently deceased member of the congregation who had served with the Marine Raiders during World War II.

Participating in the dedication was Gregory Brolin, son of the deceased who made the presentation on behalf of the Brolin family. The Rev. Wm. H. Ilten, pastor, presided at the dedication rites and was assisted by Norbert Talbert, elder.

The color guard of the Junior ROTC of Lutheran High, La Verne, directed by Sgt. Mauor John Nicolopulos and bugler James Mudge also assisted with the dedication and flag-raising ceremonies. Robert Courtney presented the first flag to be flown from the new pole to the congregation in memory of his father, Herbert, a veteran of World War I.

Eugene Brolin, in whose memory the new flag pole was dedicated, was born in Tuttle, N.D., on May 29, 1922. He married Avis McMillan on Feb. 16, 1946 after serving with the 4th Marine Raider, 6th Marine Division, WW II. He was a resident of Beloit, Wisc., for 32 years before moving to California in 1959. He was employed with Rockwell International and died Dec. 4, 1980 following a long illness. He is survived by his wife Avis, a son Gregory, a granddaughter Erica, his mother, one brother and five sisters.

Women getting in shape by playing soccer

By VONNE ROBERTSON
Staff Writer

A group of women wanting to "get into shape" and to have a chance to participate in a team sport has organized a soccer program in Claremont.

The squad is composed of about 30 women between 30 and 50. Most have impressive academic backgrounds, with several holding doctorate degrees. The group includes a city attorney, college professors high school teachers, researchers and librarians, and wives of deans and faculty members at the Claremont colleges.The squad is informally divided into two teams for practice games.

When the practice games began, the women discovered they needed to be forceful rather than polite, reported one of the organizers.

"Our first games were hilarious," Ann Stromberg recalled. "Every time one of us would knock another down, the games stopped while we apologized. The coach would yell, "No! No! Keep playing," she said.

When Wynne Furth, Claremont city attorney, first thought of organizing a soccer team she suggested the sport as "new territory in which male contemporaries were unlikely to be expert."

Stromberg, associate sociology professor at Pitzer College and active in the women's studies program, helped organize the group. About 50 women initially responded to flyers distributed.

Most of the women were reared during an era when few girl sports were offered in public schools. Some had no team sports experiences, she added.

The organizers said "acceptable reasons" for joining the group included a desire to understand what their children were doing, a regret over never having played a team sport and a desire to "kick something hard" on occasion.

Other reasons included a need to run up and down a field and the motivation of "getting into shape," she added.

"No one is disqualified for having soccer experience," said the attorney. "We need a certain number of athletes."

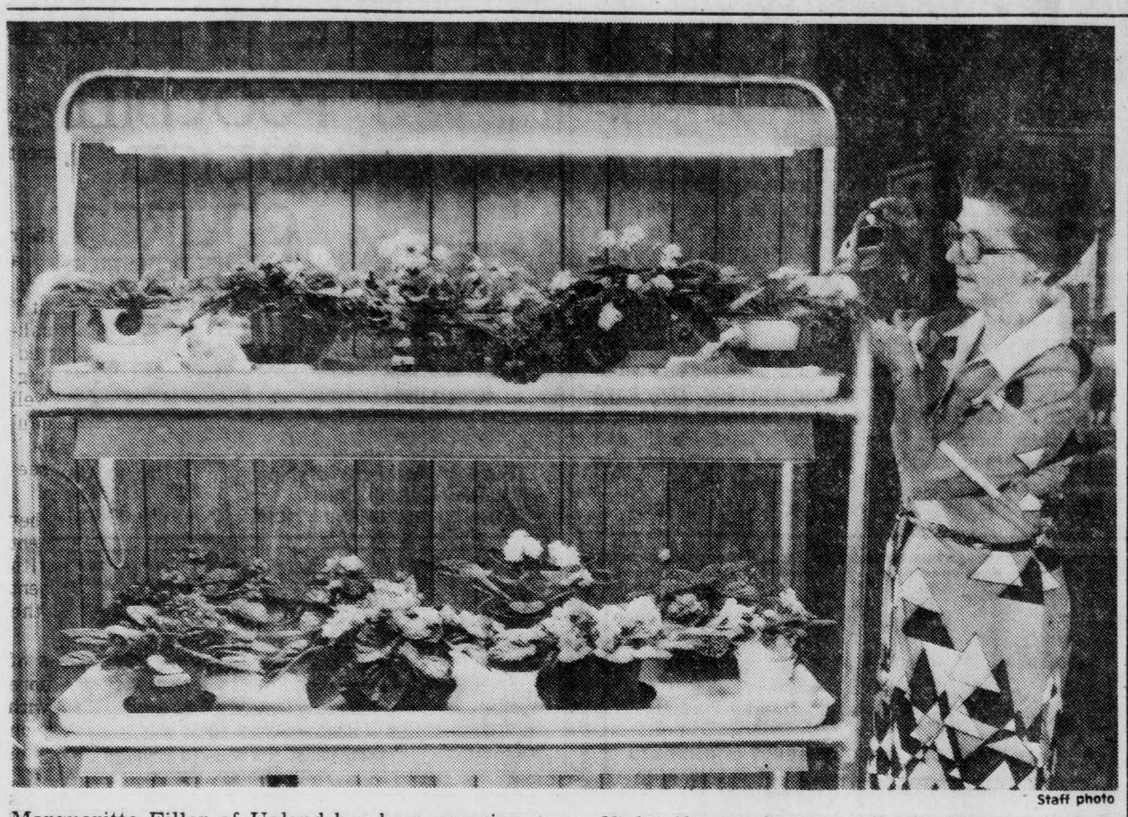

Steve Glass, assistance coach for the Pomona-Pitzer College soccer team, was recruited as coach. He outlined during the first practice sessions the rules of the game and physical conditioning recommended to avoid total humilitation and serious injuries.

"As the ball comes toward you, it's no cause to panic," he informed the women. "Instead of ducking, take some time to decide just where the ball should be kicked. Have a team plan."

After just a few weeks, Glass reported the women are "beginning to play ruthless soccer. In addition to quickly learning the rules, they are becoming competitive. And upon occasion, they play very well. Some are now good enough to become competitive players."

The women play each Saturday on the Pomona College soccer field. The audience is composed of the players' children and their proud — or worried — husbands.

Their uniforms are "anything comfortable." But plans call for team shirts. The group has progressed well for the short time involved, organizers said. They are optimistic about the program's future.

Pitzer students worked three months in capital

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

"I didn't have a 'gofer' job ... I had a real job."

"The media isn't giving the right story."

"There's a different air on the hill ... everyone is all dressed up."

These are comments made by three Pitzer College students of Claremont who took part in the Washington Center for Learning Alternatives, a national program which places students into -actual working areas of the nation's capital in Washington, D.C.

Participating were Susan Feinberg of Van Nuys, a junior taking a political science major; Cindy Schlessinger of Dallas, Texas, a junior majoring in organization studies and urban policies; and Andrea Mack of Davis, a junior in an American studies major.

*

Susan was working for the interest group, Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund. She was an observer, but said she helped write a testimonial on federal judiciary on affirmative action to present to a Congressional sub-committee.

"I found out how Washington runs and how difficult it is to get legislation passed. I also learned how to utilize research sources and lobbying tactics," Susan said.

She became quite defensive when it was suggested President Reagan's budget cuts will eliminate bilingual teachers for Mexican students.

"That program hasn't been explained well," she said. Susan explained that the Spanish-speaking children are being brought along in Spanish until they are ready for learning English and being involved in strictly English-speaking classes. With emphasis she explained there never has been the intent to only let students remain Spanish-speaking with bilingual teachers.

Susan said the result of her three-month stay was to become aware of "what is going on politically."

*

Cindy was working with the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs. "I chose NCUEA because I am interested in urban ethnic policies which not only involved Blacks and Chicanos, but other ethnic groups such as the Polish, Russian, Italian and Czechoslovakians."

Susan Feinberg

Cindy Schlessinger

Andrea Mack

One of her job areas was to work on the White House Conference of Aging for the European and American Elderly. This work took her to Baltimore and Cleveland where she Cleveland. This experience gave her a better understanding of problems after seeing and being in large city urban areas.

Cindy said it was a beneficial experience to be working with people concerned with gerentology. The organization she was with did not deal with government funding, but she did get a taste of bureaucracy and observed "different people wanting what they thought they should have."

Since it was campaign time (October, 1980), Cindy and Susan were able to attend campaign parties and heard John Anderson, independent candidate for the presidency, speak.

Cindy and Susan agreed their interest groups were "working on very small budgets." Susan said, "I didn't see any waste." Both worked from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and sometimes put in overtime and "felt completely a part of the job."

Cindy said she would like to work on local and state urban levels before considering going into federal work after graduation.

*

Andrea Mack had considered journalism as a career, so her intern work with the Washington Center for Learning Alternative program put her on the "Washington Monthly" staff. She described the publication as a small political magazine where she "watched, did errands and lots of graphics." She also was screening manuscripts which were passed on or rejected by the editor.

"I read some good things," she said, "and one was accepted. Some were terrible and not geared to the magazine."

Andrea said the publication could be classed as liberal, "extremely anti-Reagan," but "they weren't for Carter either."

One of her jobs was to read the Wall Street Journal, Washington Post and New York Times each morning searching for articles which could be developed for the magazine.

One thing Andrea said she learned was "how a personality influences journalism as the writer projects his/her opinions into articles.

"Working at the magazine has made me a more critical reader," she said.

Interestingly, Andrea has changed her mind about journalism and would "like to work in some aspect with a museum."

*

The three students consider their three months in Washington a growing experience.

Andrea said, "At first I hated it." She didn't like the impersonal quality of a big city, but eventually adjusted and found it fascinating. "The whole experience was well worth it ... at times it was painful and difficult but I've learned a lot." She enjoyed the opportunities of seeing plays and touring museums.

Susan wasn't impressed with her living quarters in a huge apartment complex "in a bad area with cockroaches and stuff, but I spent most of my free time at the Smithsonian."

Cindy liked the opportunities of going to the other cities (Baltimore and Cleveland) as connected with her work. She did sightseeing on weekends and "saw everything in Georgetown."

Basicalyy, the three students came back to California convinced "there's no place like Pitzer!"

Casa Casino Royale due

The fifth annual Casa Casino Royale, sponsored by the Auxiliary of Casa Colina Hospital for Rehabilitative Medicine Inc., Pomona, will be held April 4 in Taylor Hall, 1717 N. Indian Hill Blvd., Claremont.

The casino will open at 8 p.m. and continue until midnight. There will be a finger buffet and Las Vegas-type games, silent auction, dancing and prizes.

Proceeds will benefit the program and equipment needs of Casa Colina Hospital. Over the past three years, the auxiliary has given $20,000 to the Wheelchair Basketball Team program which was initiated by Casa Colina in 1978.

The funds helped provide athletic chairs, uniforms, basketballs and travel funds for the team, the Casa Colina Condors. Last year, the Condors competed against 159 teams and became the national champions.

In other areas, the auxiliary recently gave $3,700 to the Children's Services Center of Casa Colina Hospital, $3,050 for redecorating the Daily Living Room used by patients; $2,600 for the swim-fit program; $600 for a gurney used in the nursing department; and $540 for the stroke program.

Helping support the auxiliary in their donations are funds derived from the Casa Colina Gift Shop located in the hospital lobby.

Reservations can be made by calling Susan Davis, director of auxiliary services, 593-7521, extension 401.

Mrs. Richard Anderson is event coordinator and reservations chairman. Assisting her are: the Mmes. Dennis O'Connor, prizes; Richard Johnson, silent auction; Ronald Rinker, entertainment; and Jack McNicoll, food.

Most people don't know how much new home really costs

By Clyde V. Smith
Copley News Service

Do you know what price you pay for the money you use to buy a home? You may be well aware of the percentage interest rates, but did you ever pause to figure out what the ultimate total cost will be?

It's astronomical, really, in these days of extraordinarily high mortgage interest costs.

You may pay back two or three times the money you borrow in interest costs long before the loan matures.

It has often been said, and probably is true, that home buyers today are not as much concerned about the price of a dwelling, or the mortgage interest rates, as they are about the monthly payments. Can they afford the out-of-the-paycheck costs to cover principal and interest payments each month? That's their bottom line.

Relatively few owners who are paying off mortgages have given any thought about the total amount of payments they will make before they can claim their home as their very own, free of encumberance.

A random, casual survey among a few friends brought some strange and varied answers.

Most of them underestimated their total interest costs, responding with answers such as, "Oh, I guess half again as much as I borrowed, maybe a little more," or, "I'd say my interest when I get my mortgage paid off will be about equal to the loan itself."

A few, very few were somewhere in actual ballpark figures with interest estimates of "two or more times" the loan, while some, acutely aware of how slow the loan principal shrinks during the early life of a mortgage, gave exaggerated guesses of, "Gosh, it must be four or five times as much."

So I did a little mathematical exercise to come up with some exact cost figures, using as an example an $80,000 house sale, financed with an 80 percent loan of $64,000 at 14 percent interest, the current conventional rate at the time this week. (Latest rate now 15 percent.)

Total interest costs also will vary, depending on the term of the mortgage.

For starters, we chose a 30-year $64,000 mortgage at 14 percent, which a lender said would require a monthly payment of $758.32 to amortize principal and interest, mostly interest at the beginning. Thirty-year loans are now common.

If my arithmetic is correct, that would be $9,099.84 each 12 months, multiplied by 30 years would add up to a grand total of $272,995.20. Subtract the original $64,000 loan amount and you come up with $208,995.20 in interest costs over the life of the mortgage. Thus the interest costs alone are well more than three times the original loan.

If you reduce the term of the mortgage to 20 years, your monthly payments go up $37.51 to $795.85, but even at 14 percent, total interest costs are much lower. It figures out like this payment totaling $9,550.20 for the year, multiplied by 20 for a grand total of $191,004. Again subtract the $64,000 original loan and interest costs over the 20-year span amount to $127,004 just $1,000 short of double the original loan.

There has been serious consideration given to extending mortgage loan terms to 40 years on the premise of lowering monthly payments so that more families with moderate incomes could qualify for loans. But so far, I'm not aware of any lender willing to approve 40-year loans. It just doesn't "pencil out," as they say in the trade.

For instance, the $64,000 loan used in the examples above would require a month payment of $750.08 to amortize in 40 years. That's just $8.24 a month less than the 30-year loan. But look what is does to total interest costs..

The year's payments would amount to $9,000.96. Multiplied by 40 years, total payments over the life of the mortgage $360,038.40. But subtract the original $64,000 loan, and total interest costs are whopping $296,038.40. That's substantially more than 4.5 times the loan, in interest costs alone.

There is a school of thought that says keep your residence mortgaged to the hilt. Use your built-up equity to invest in other opportunities, whether or not it is real estate. They also point out that a heavily mortgaged house may be easier to sell, because it will require less of a down payment.

Methinks you can go too far with this kind of logic. Suppose the other investment turns sour. Suppose you get overextended in borrowing on your equity.

Many knowledgeable people in the trade say interest costs are not that important because, on the average, a house is resold within seven years. thus you don't pay the exorbitant interest cost cited above. You also don't reduce the loan principal to any significant measure in that span of time.

But you may build up a substantial equity, due to the traditional pattern of appreciation which many buyers have used to upgrade their housing accommodations. So there is a valid point to this line of thinking.

There's also another side to this interest cost coin. High interest costs, even at today's inflated rates, are not all that expensive when considered from another angle.

For many years, part of the advantage touted for home ownership has been the fact that owner can deduct interest and property taxes from the income on which he has to pay tax.

Since that time, Plasson has conducted for the Metz Opera, and the Orchestre de Paris, among others. He has been with the Orchestre de Toulouse since 1968.

French-born pianist / conductor, Philippe Entremont, will appear as a soloist with the orchestra.

Entremont assumed the role of pianist / conductor 13 years ago. He made his recording debut two years later, leading the Collegium Musicum of Paris in an all-Mozart disc for Columbia Records. Since that time he has traveled throughout the world, directing as well as performing with the world's best orchestras.

Shift to stock market a possibility as rates fall

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

The big question in financial circles today is whether the money - market mutual funds have anything in common with Mount St. Helens.

That is to say, it's crucial to know if the money in money - market funds is "hot" money — lavalike lucre that will quickly flow to other investments if returns are better — and if it is, whether or not that money might flow to the stock market.

The subject is important because the money - market funds are skyrocketing.

If interest rates continue to fall, some of the money will flow out of the funds and chase other investments, as has been the historical pattern. But there is no agreement on how much of the money will leave, and whether it will go into stocks. Some analysts think most of the money now reposed in funds came from savings accounts and certificates, not common stocks or bonds, and would be likely to go back there.

Others insist that the money has come out of the stock market — that investors are temporarily getting a high yield as they wait on the sidelines deciding whether to plunge into the market. That's the way institutional investors operate: They keep a sliding percentage in the market and another portion in highly liquid short - term instruments, sometimes called "cash" or "cash equivalents," and another part in long-term bonds. When the market changes, the cash pile will quickly be invested elsewhere.

As interviews with investment pros reveal, opinions vary on where the money - market funds' money came from — and where it might go if interest rates recede and other investments such as stocks look attractive.

The answer would appear to be up to the Federal Reserve, which has promised it won't let interest rates fall as rapidly as they did last year.

"A Chorus Line," the dance musical conceived, choreographed and directed by Michael Bennett will be presented live on stage at Bridges Auditorium, Saturday, April 11 at 5 and 9 p.m. Tickets are now on sale at the box office, Fourth and College Way in Claremont. The musical is about 23 dancers who stand on a white line and audition for eight available roles — "four girls, four boys." For information call 621-8031.

New Claremont Graduate School, university center president named

John David Maguire, 48, president of State University of New York, College at Old Westbury, has been named president of Claremont Graduate School and Claremont University Center.

The appointment becomes effective July 1, according to Thornton Bradshaw, chairman of the Board of Fellows.

He succeeds Joseph B. Platt, who is retiring in June after five years as president of the university center and graduate school.

The announcement was made at a special meeting of the Board of Fellows. Maguire's selection ends a national search initiated last summer by a trustee committee headed by Los Angeles attorney Kenneth O. Rhodes.

In announcing the appointment, Bradshaw described Maguire as "an internationally respected teacher, scholar and administrator who has demonstrated vision, imagination and outstanding qualities of leadership."

Maguire, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Washington and Lee University in Virginia, has been president of College at Old Westbury, one of the colleges in the SUNY system, for 11 years.

Under his leadership, the college enrollment has grown from 223 students in 1970 to 3,223 full-time and part-time students currently enrolled. The faculty has grown from 24 to 140 members.

Maguire was a Fulbright scholar at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. He graduated from the Yale Divinity School and then directed Yale's International Student Center while completing a doctorate in theology.

He taught briefly at the Yale Divinity School before joining the faculty of Wesleyan University in Connecticut in 1960.

Maguire became Old Westbury's second president in 1970.

In 1978, Maguire was selected by the American Council on Education and "Change" magazine as one of the 100 young leaders in American higher education.

During a sabbatical year in 1976-77 Maguire served as a visiting professor at Silliman University in the Philippines and at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

'Historic Riverside' on exhibit

An exhibition of photographs tracing the development of downtown Riverside and the growth of the area's citrus industry will go on display Friday at the California Museum of Photography.

"Historic Riverside 1890-1940," with about 60 images, will continue through April 18 at the museum, located in Watkins House at the University of California, Riverside. Hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and admission is free.

Included will be vintage prints showing views of the Mission Inn, the Riverside County Courthouse, Riverside's own Chinatown, and a variety of motels, houses and theatres.

About one-third of the prints will document development of the Citrus Experiment Station building, UCR's oldest structure, built in 1916.

Should you pay your carrier . . .

or not?

You don't have to. It's purely a matter for you to decide.

This newspaper is what is called in newspaper circles, a controlled circulation newspaper. There are dozens across the country—enough even to have conventions. The purpose of a controlled circulation newspaper is to provide local news, local service and local advertising to an important, independent, interested community.

But where does your carrier come in? They are paid a minimum allowance for delivering your local newspaper. They depend on you, really for their income, because when they collect, most of it is theirs. Controlled circulation newspapers work like that, on a voluntary pay plan.

We hope you appreciate and enjoy your newspaper enough to voluntarily pay your carrier. They are dependable. They are rendering you a service. They would like to earn the money. Pay them? Think about it.
